The NAM's campaign to secure federal COVID-19 liability protections for manufacturers is bearing fruit. Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX) and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) introduced the SAFE TO WORK Act yesterday. It's part of Senate Republicans' larger proposed COVID-19 relief package and mirrors the NAM's "Pandemic Liability Policy Recommendations." It would protect businesses from lawsuits that seek to take advantage of the confusion and evolving landscape of federal, state and local health and safety guidance on COVID-19.

The SAFE TO WORK Act is an opening bid for what will surely be a complex and difficult negotiation involving both parties in the House and Senate, but the NAM is working tirelessly to make the case for why liability protections are necessary and how they would strongly incentivize businesses across the country to do their best to keep workers and customers safe. Stay tuned for a policy briefing later this week on the legislation and how it works. Contact NAM Vice President of Legal and Deputy General Counsel Patrick Hedren or NAM Assistant Vice President of Advocacy Michael O'Brien for details on how to get in touch with your members of Congress and urge them to support these crucial protections.

NAM Guides New Round of Stimulus

Your NAM has been and will continue working closely with members of the House and Senate to ensure a bipartisan stimulus plan. In addition to liability protections, the Senate GOP stimulus proposal released yesterday includes other recommendations from the NAM's "American Renewal Action Plan." It would provide increased funding for the Paycheck Protection Program, more funding for testing and additional tax incentives for manufacturers that keep their employees on payroll and to help manufacturers continue investing in personal protective equipment and other safety measures.
